Instead of exchanging individual gifts, consider a group activity. This could be volunteering together for a local charity, participating in a holiday-themed craft session, or even cooking a festive meal as a team. These shared experiences forge stronger bonds and create lasting memories.

Prioritizing Presence:

In today's hyper-connected world, it's easy to be physically present but mentally absent. Make a conscious effort to put away distractions like phones and truly engage with the people around you. Listen actively, share stories, and be fully immersed in the moment. This is the essence of "all I want for Christmas is us."

Think of quiet evenings, shared laughter, or simply the comfort of knowing someone is there. The repeated refrain, "All I want for Christmas is us," is not a dismissal of the joy of giving and receiving gifts, but rather a powerful reordering of priorities.
